But as soon as Apple introduced iTunes (released in 2005), MP3 audio tracks were deleted automatically, and users need to re-export all audio tracks from iTunes to MP3 before they can use the tracks on the desktop or laptop. So in order to save MP3, iTunes users must convert all audio to.MP3 again before they can listen to them. Moreover, as iPhones become popular and have been widely used by consumers,.MP3 files have become the standard audio format in iPhone users. Apple provides iTunes to play music on iPhones and iPods. At the same time, it converts MP3 to AAC, and AAC to.MP3 to support players in other companies. So the mobile device that needs to store.MP3, must save it before iTunes; and iTunes users must convert MP3 to.MP3 to play the
