Ashampoo has developed a program to test the Windows compatibility of your PC. With this easy to use application, you can check if your current PC configuration will be compatible with the Windows 11 operating system. The software calculates the amount of free disk space required, the memory space needed, the compatibility of the boot method, the possibility of enabling UEFI, secure boot, TPM (Trusted Platform Module) and DirectX. Since this tool checks your hardware and components on a system level, it is a necessary step before installing Windows 11. It is free and does not require user registration. Before you try the Windows 11 Compatibility Check program, you should know your Windows version. Run Windows Search, type "Windows version" to view your current operating system version. How to get your current Windows version: Windows 10 / Windows 8 / Windows 8.1 / Windows 7 / Windows Vista: 1. Press Windows + X button, click "Search in this PC", then select "Command Prompt". 2. Type in command line: "winver" and press Enter key. 3. Look for a string which says "Product Name" in the output of the command: "winver | find "Product Name". Example: "winver | find "Windows 10"". 4. If the output contains "ProdVersionN", such as "10.0.15063.0" or "10.0.15063.32" you have a Windows 10 installation. Type in command line: "winver" and press Enter key. 5. Look for a string which says "Product Name" in the output of the command: "winver | find "Product Name". Example: "winver | find "Windows 8.1"". 6. If the output contains "PRODUCT_BUILD_NUMBER", such as "10.0.15063.1" you have a Windows 8.1 installation. Type in command line: "winver" and press Enter key. 7. Look for a string which says "Product Name" in the output of the command: "winver | find "Product Name". Example: "winver | find "Windows 8"". 8. If the output does not contain "Product Name", you have an older Windows installation. Type in command line: "winver" and press Enter key. 9. Look for a string which says "Product Name" in the output of the command
