When it comes to an education for dyslexics, there are some who provide absolute understanding and help your child learn to read and be successful. There are also other schools that enforce rigid strict rules on your child, they think your baby brain is easy to fix and there is no potential for dyslexia. There are schools that are so militant in their approach, they can't be parents of dyslexic children and parents end up not being allowed to send their children to their school because they just can't put up with all the strict rules. We are lucky in that we have both worlds when it comes to our childrens' learning. We are lucky and proud of our school. We have huge support from outside in terms of extra help, home schoolers who can come in to help our children with literacy. We have a 570a42141b
