Are there any concerns of being lost when a pilot in an aircraft without a vertical speed monitor would start, for example, turning towards or descending into land while flying with the engines off? A: There are, of course, no issues with flying the airplane without feedback on the elevator. However, the issues will arise if the airplane is flown without reference to airspeed, or with airspeed that is incorrect. Airspeed: The key to the safe operation of all single-engine airplanes, powered by reciprocating air-cooled engines and retrofitted with after-market instruments, is to maintain an understanding of current airspeed relative to any part that can interfere with a positive rate-of-descent in that airplane: the power, windscreen, stabilizers, and, quite possibly, the wings. Wind Speed: ... if airspeed is incorrect, you risk losing height with no warning of diminishing airspeed. For example, suppose that you are climbing in level flight at 140 knots, when wind

Shocked, again, again, again, again and again (and again) ... we were stunned, shocked, taken aback, and surprised, and again and again (again). These were the key words that kept popping up in our minds while we were applying for this Spring Diploma Fellowship, and we have accepted this opportunity (take a bow Mambwe) because we will get the opportunity to work with YouTHINK who believes in 'Think Local, Act Local, Serve the World,' and where we will be working on post-conflict reconstruction in the Eastern DRC; on enhancing civilian recovery in post-conflict conflict states, and on women's participation in the peace process. However, here is a great chance to put in real action our passion for thinking, (yes, it's all over) engagement theory, development, critical and developmental theory. Hence, have a look at their blog and maybe be part of this fantastic development initiative! We love YOUTHINK! we love YOUTHINK! we love YOUTHINK! how awesome this is. Dear DRC, we are honoured to be a part of this and am so excited to have this opportunity. We should have said DRC as in What's up DRC, we meant Zaire (dear, why it took us so long to explain something that is so obvious...).ukaryotic elongation factor-1 $\alpha$  (F-1 $\alpha$ ), which represent proteins involved in the inhibition of mRNA translation. In the present study, no clear difference in levels of the F-1 $\alpha$  were demonstrated in the injured spinal cord compared to the NC. The exact reasons for no change of these proteins in the injured spinal cord are unclear and require further investigation. It can be speculated that because of the robustness of the mammalian spinal cord, the inhibiting effect of the protein translation-related factor(s) following PNS injury is alleviated, as indicated by no significant reduction in protein levels of the F-1 $\alpha$ . Conclusions ===== Our study shows that a single, 2 h, 50-Hz, 2.4-mT MF exposure
