Like others mentioned, I'd go with XSEED. They're often reliable and they also have decent visuals. I'm pretty excited for the bruce and baby games as well as the mobile games Also, have you considered Sega's twitter account? I'm pretty sure they've been very active on Twitter with character (and game) announcements lately, so there may be

Also, does anyone have their opinions on the new bar set-up and the new cable routing of the handle. I have more info in this post... It seems as the previous post was cut off but the other info is all there. Looks like a great new set up man, I saw your post on the Barlow In The Curve thread which is the first thread I've posted on in a while, I love those set ups but I have a weird jeaou over the whole long bar concept lol, like what if the ring or finger fall off.. Like I know it's not going to happen but it just seems like something might go wrong. Overall, I'd love to know what you like better between the two setup's I think the new cable routing would be awesome, like you can get a lower stance and stuff. in the old Barlow, you lost the control of all the hand feel aspect in the low position and low stance, but now all control is back, its a bitch and in cant change my stance to fit something else, but atleast i can control it with throttle and brakes. Not much for bars there, I have big feet, I like a shorter bar, especially for
