HyperMotion Technology is being made possible thanks to the advances in deep learning applied to this new generation of capturing data. Building on the ground-breaking performance of the World Cup 2018 edition, the multi-player gameplay and real-time action feedback of players, Team 2K Sports is able to bring its expertise to the next generation of gameplay on and off the pitch. FIFA 20 had introduced “contextually-aware Fouls,” which used AI to identify when the ball hit the player. This was presented as a very welcome addition to Fouls, particularly in the sense that it gave the fans a feeling that they are defending their team through watching the game. FIFA 22 also introduces this technology as it will now be able to take cues from the players’ real-time movements to better predict where the ball is going and give you a more entertaining experience. FIFA 20’s AI was first introduced through “Vision Control.” When the ball entered a teammate’s player and the AI possessed the ball, other teammates would instinctively look to pass the ball back to their teammate. Vision Control would then react to different situations like when a teammate’s player runs at an opposing player before launching a bomb. It was a functional addition to the game but it was never a priority to keep evolving the AI in FIFA. In FIFA 22, the AI has been significantly advanced. In short, the AI now moves more like human players. Players who are instructed to move toward the ball will naturally react by going after it. Additionally, the AI can now make the decision if it should pass the ball back to the initial teammate or leave the ball on the pitch and help teammates. The AI also remembers who you played with and will try to play in the same position as you did the last time. Make sure to check out the full FIFA 24 announcement trailer here: A conversation with EA SPORTS FIFA \(ESFI\) EVP Alex Garden, “You’ve been given the honour of managing a football club as it takes on Barcelona. What can you tell us about the clubs you’ve managed?” Alex Garden: For this franchise, we have created a series of clubs from around the globe, some of which are real, and some of which are fictional. You can be a fan of both Manchester United and Real Madrid, if you so choose, you can be a fan of Tottenham Hotspur, and you can support Juventus, Inter Milan, and even the infamous “worst” club in the world, Boston Breakers. With your influence, some clubs will prosper, while others will fall by the wayside. It’s up to you and your tacticians to build a squad that can take on the competition and compete with the big boys. This also leads into the new simulation engine, which is built specifically for personalization. We have spent a lot of time making sure that the teams in the game are true and real-life football clubs, but we want to give you as much freedom as possible to customize the
