While cardiovascular diseases (CVD) are the leading cause of morbidity and mortality in the Western world, the exact pathogenesis of these pathologies is still poorly understood. Genetic susceptibility, lifestyle factors, and environmental exposure have all been suggested to play a role in the development of CVD. In the present study, we evaluated the concentration of salivary (s)-epinephrine and s-norepinephrine in a group of obese children (8-16 years of age) with severe cardiometabolic abnormalities (ODV) and a group of normal-weight healthy children (6-16 years of age). Higher s-epinephrine levels were observed in the ODV group. Moreover, s-epinephrine concentration was positively correlated with s-leptin in obese children, and negatively with s-nitrite/nitrate levels. These findings suggest that epinephrine may be involved in the etiology of obesity-related cardiometabolic abnormalities. We hypothesize that hypothalamic-pituitary adrenal activation may be present in children with early-onset obesity. The United States has sanctioned 12 individuals, including Russian news agencies, for the alleged cyber

Team of the Week Each week, we'll be unveiling a new installment of our Team of the Week, where our top X, bench or best overall players will get the week off - at least for a while. This week we have three standout players! Meet goalkeeper Lucasz Skorupski, striker Michy Batshuayi and midfielder Gylfi Sigurdsson. Liverpool's goalkeeper Lucasz Skorupski. Liverpool's goalkeeper Lucasz Skorupski always looks up for the challenge. Skorupski, who is already English football's youngest-ever goalkeeper, topped off a spectacular debut season for his club by breaking a string of 100 consecutive clean sheets in the league. While in England, he has been making some waves with his performance for Poland, in which he has shut out the likes of Spain and the Netherlands to secure his spot on the 2018 World Cup roster. He has also proven to be a standout performer at U19 level, featuring for Poland at the 2012 London Olympics. And while he isn't an All-Star, Skorupski is arguably the best goalkeeper in the Premier League. He's saved 16 shots, as Liverpool cruised to its first league championship in 49 years. And of course, Skorupski is one of the best goalkeepers in the game. He's on the Ball! Nifty little trick he has here - he sends it right up the centre of the penalty area and it's a simple tap-in into the unguarded net! The youngster's talent is obvious; his reflexes and distribution are as good as they come, and his confidence and application in the physical side of the game are nothing short of phenomenal. Michy Batshuayi. Michy Batshuayi has literally changed the business end of the Premier League since joining Chelsea from Marseille in 2014. The Belgium attacker has
