The literature is replete with studies suggesting that chronic exposure to cigarette smoke is associated with increased frequency of thymic involution \[[@B7]-[@B10]\] and thymic lymphoma. \[[@B11]\] In addition, there is evidence to suggest that cigarette smoke exposure is involved in the development of thymic lymphomas. \[[@B7],[@B12],[@B13]\] However, Thymic lymphoma in a patient with longstanding history of cigarette smoking is relatively rare. \[[@B11]\] This makes our case unusual in that (1) it had a very long latency period between exposure to cigarette smoke and presentation of symptoms, (2) there were not any risk factors that would predispose the patient for thymic lymphoma, and (3) thymic lymphoma occurred as a presenting symptom of chronic cigarette smoking. It is interesting that in this patient, thymic lymphoma was discovered during a workup for an asymptomatic aortic aneurysm. We believe that the thymic lymphoma that occurred in this patient was the consequence of the subclinical thymic involution resulting from long-standing cigarette smoking. This is further supported by the fact that there were no other significant risk factors that could have predisposed the patient for thymic lymphoma. Of course, it is also possible that the aortic aneurysm that was discovered incidentally was the consequence of cigarette smoking and hence related to lymphoma, and that a causal relationship could not be established in this case. However, this would be unlikely because (1) our patient did not have any signs or symptoms suggestive of aneurysmal disease and (2) the pathological specimen that was sent for frozen section was found to be lymphoma. The patient's past medical history included hypertension, hyperlipidemia, and hyperuricemia. Hyperlipidemia and hyperuricemia would be expected to contribute to development of thymic lymphoma

Dying Breath is a project created by Cephalophore Studios, a team of experienced developers with a passion for online games and a vast knowledge of the 'offline' world. The game has been in development since 2016 and now is fully playable with an Alpha build out. A few things to know before playing: • Dying Breath is currently in Alpha/Beta state and unfinished, so expect some degree of instability and crashes. Please bear with us and if you encounter any major issues, please report them! • Dying Breath is free to play for everyone and contains no micro transactions. • Dying Breath has a completionist ending, but we are still working on making the game more explorable and interesting for casual players, especially after the Gold edition. • This game has no limitations on the number of characters you may have, or the number of different characters you may hire (meaning that there is no 'level cap'). The only thing you need to care about when creating your character is that every character has only one class. • Dying Breath is a competitive multiplayer game. You will see other players around you, and you may even interact with them. It is recommended that you play in private matches to get a feel for the game without all the distractions of a public match. • Dying Breath is currently in release on Steam. We're keeping it here as a testing platform for a few months. We hope to move to the Xbox Game Pass by then. • Dying Breath uses Sony's PlayStation Network DRM. Check out the 'Dying Breath: How to play' section of the instructions for more information. As your game is your own, Dying Breath is yours to use however you like. This is a very friendly game. We'd love to have your feedback, so please send us anything you find! In the meantime, we're happy to answer any questions you have on Dying Breath and to discuss our plans for the future of the game. You're always welcome to join us on Discord. Thank you for your support and your interest! Support for Dying Breath on

Titanfall - Best original FPS game of 2016 The best original FPS game of 2016 - h... The best FPS game of 2016 - hands down!---What do you mean "This game isn't available on Xbox One"? It's been out for more than a month now! Boombox: You're taking the position, you're taking the position, back and forth. I wanna see some of this move, you're all about the, well, back and forth. For a fighter like you, when you're going up, you're going up, it's like a beautiful piece of choreography, like beautifully choreographed. There's a lot of flash, but you can't score anything from that. You can score from, I can score from the other thing, if I'm not falling down because there's a dip. Understood. So if you can keep getting to the bottom of the dip and you can't get hurt in doing that, I'm gonna build a platform for you to stay there. And then we're gonna have some space to build, but then again, if you're climbing, that's not scoring, so that's a moment that you gotta take advantage of. So it's like you're like a dancer, you gotta perfect your dance. And the timing, that's where, even if you don't see it, you feel it. If you're falling to the right side, it's that, if you're falling and you want to execute a pose, you gotta feel your body drop down to the right or to the left. Feel what it takes, and you have to think about what takes, it's not just, "Oh, I see this block here." If you're on that, we're going to build up. Stair climb. Like you know, if I'm coming out of the, if I'm at the top of that, if I'm going to jump down, I gotta check the flow of the body. Where am I, where am I falling? What is the angle? So it's the same thing, but it's, but it's also about knowing, when I'm going to jump from this platform to this platform, like, "Oh, is this the best spot to jump?" Or, "Oh, is this a weak spot?" Or, "Well, how far can I get this jump, can I get there, can I put down?" So it's, it's all about
