@Wind energy in Italy Italy has an extensive wind energy industry. There are four major regions: Trentino-Alto Adige/Südtirol in the north, Veneto in the north-east, Lombardy in the centre, and the island of Sardinia in the south. Onshore wind energy is the most abundant in Italy. Wind energy in Italy was 4% of energy production in 2006, increasing to 7% in 2008. Italy has an ambitious target of 20% renewable energy by 2020, and plans to invest €2 billion in wind energy. Italy has potential for developing wind energy production. The country has both large-scale wind parks and potential for onshore and offshore wind energy. Currently the total installed capacity of wind energy in Italy is approximately 7,100 MW. It is estimated that between 8,700 and 9,600 MW of onshore wind capacity could be installed if the country fulfilled its 20% goal by 2020. Italy, together with Spain and Portugal, is among the European countries with the highest energy use per capita. Italy's electricity consumption per person was slightly higher than Spain and Portugal at 13,300 kWh per year in 2008. This was followed by Denmark (11,100 kWh per year) and Germany (10,800 kWh per year). Electricity from onshore wind turbines in Italy In 2007 the Italian government opened bidding procedures to start developing 7,250 MW of wind energy. According to figures provided by the Agency for the Assessment of Bids, the tender process was opened in the spring of 2007 and closed in August 2007, when 17 companies submitted bids. A winner was not selected until June 2008. The first onshore wind farms were built at the Friuli-Venezia Giulia region, in Italy's northeastern part, near the Slovenian border. Italy's 2008 climate action plan In 2008 the Italian government's Climate Action Plan (CPAN) calls for development of renewable energy, notably the use of wind power. According to Italian government estimates, by 2020, Italy will require an additional 15,000 MW of renewable energy capacity. Italy aims to use wind energy to generate 11,400 MW by 2020, with an additional 16,000 MW by 2030. Another aim is to cut energy use by 15% by 2020 and by 33% by 2030. Green Energy and the Green Economy Italy, like many other countries, has called for a "green economy". This calls for development of

What's new:

: Armageddon Red Faction: Armageddon is a first-person shooter video game for Microsoft Windows and Xbox 360. Initially released on September 12, 2008, Red Faction: Armageddon is a prequel to Red Faction: Guerrilla, which was released in February 2009 and developed by Volition and published by THQ. Taking place in 2212, fifteen years before the events of the original game, Red Faction: Armageddon depicts the mercenary Zach Mason and his attempt to stop the corporate oppression of the whole planet Mars. Gameplay Red Faction: Armageddon is significantly different from the previous Red Faction games, as it plays as a first-person shooter. The player takes on the role of the Red Faction mercenary Zach Mason and will be able to use vehicles during gameplay. Players control Mason by moving his head using the Xbox 360 controller and can see the game's surroundings through a first-person viewpoint. This also allows the player to freely explore the environments while keeping the enemy in sight, in contrast to the previous games where most of the action would be from a fixed, overhead perspective. The player will be able to pick up and interact with a variety of weapons located on weapons rack that can be found throughout the game, as well as combine such objects to create various power-ups and modifications. Once the player has encountered enough resistance, however, they will either drop off a weapon rack or need to find a new one. Typically, headshots with a shotgun or explosive damage, as well as spraying a crowd with a minigun, are the most effective ways of avoiding or killing enemies. Armor, meanwhile, can be found in certain spots throughout the game, but in most cases the player has to acquire it themselves by opening panels on the ground or in vehicles. As in the previous games, the player will be able to loot enemies, which will then give up items that may be used against other enemies. The player is able to control both vehicles (such as the ubiquitous skimmer) and walkable objects (such as an armored bulldozer), with the player character physically affected by the size and mass of certain objects. While driving, the player is able to drive through and over objects, for instance jumping over fences or driving through small "blocks" of rock or concrete during wall jumps and such. A "Flash Jump" is an invulnerable attack that the player can deliver on the ground from any location, at the cost of a limited number of flash charges (rechargeable capacitors). The player can carry five, which they
