This invention relates to a time-lapse camera. In, for example, a conventional time-lapse camera, recording of still images or a movie takes place with a shutter of a charge coupled device (CCD) being opened and closed after time intervals during the exposure operation of the camera. The term "time-lapse" camera as used herein signifies a camera in which for each still image or frame of a movie, a recording operation is carried out at a particular time interval during exposure of the camera. In order to distinguish between the frames during a movie, "frame number" notation is sometimes used. Frames are distinguished from each other by frame number. Each frame has a certain frame number. The charge coupled device is a device having a very large number of pixels arranged in a matrix in one-to-one correspondence. Each pixel is capable of representing the intensity (signal level) of light of a certain frequency. Thus, each pixel can be regarded as an area on which light is focused or reflected. The charge coupled device has an ability to record an image by adding signal charges corresponding to the intensity (the signal level) of the light of a certain frequency for each pixel at which the light is focused or reflected. It is a recording mechanism for the type of still image or the movie. In order to reduce the influence of disturbance light, such as light from a light source, on the charge coupled device, the charge coupled device is covered with an optical shutter placed at a place which is at a position outside 1cd36666d

In this study, a drug-resistant cancer therapy agent, with biocompatibility, low cytotoxicity, controllable drug release, and synergistic and enhanced photothermal and magnetic responses, was developed using well-dispersed, well-coupled, and monodisperse nanoparticles of Fe3O4/TiO2/poly-dopamine (PDA) with a mean hydrodynamic size of 87.6 nm. The Fe3O4/TiO2 nanoparticles were fabricated using an in situ ion-exchange process of Fe-Ti layered double hydroxide. The functional polymer PDA was used as both a chelating agent and a linker between the TiO2 nanoparticles and the polyethylene glycol (PEG) coating. PEG-(NH3)2 is a surface hydroxyl-terminated polyethylene glycol used as a capping agent for the targeting and tumor accumulation of the PDA-based multifunctional nanoparticles. The Fe3O4/TiO2/PDA nanoparticles exhibited controllable and sustained drug release, enhanced cellular uptake, improved photothermal/chemotherapy, and magnetic
