How do I create a generic list where I specify the list elements to be the collection/class of a particular base type. For example: class foo { int id {get; set;} } class bar { foo baseFoo {get; set;} string id {get; set;} } foo[] getAllFoos() { //Base type is foo return typeof(foo).GetGenericTypeDefinition().CreateList() } The CreateList() method obviously doesn't exist. But I'm looking for something with similar functionality that creates a generic list based on the type of List A: Create them using reflection: static List Create(IEnumerable items) where TBase : class { List result = new List(); foreach (TBase tBase in items) result.Add(tBase); return result; } Usage: static void Main(string[] args) { var bases = typeof(Foo).GetGenericTypeDefinition().GetGenericArguments(); var allBases = bases.ToList; var allFoos = Create(allBases); allFoos.ForEach(m => Console.WriteLine(m.Id)); } EDIT - Alternative, doing exactly as requested: static List<
