SOURCE:[Pharmacokinetic characteristics and concentration-response relationship of benazepril in rats]. With the aim of studying the pharmacokinetic characteristics and concentration-response relationship of benazepril (BZP) and exploring the dose selection of BZP in vivo, the study was carried out with BZP at five doses, and the results were analyzed by non-compartmental analysis. The disposition of BZP could be described by two-compartment open model in rats, and the mean (SD) pharmacokinetic parameters were as follows: 1.11 (0.47) L/kg, 12.63 (3.64) min, and 0.54 (0.22) L/kg, respectively. After BZP was administered orally at doses of 1.2, 4, 12 and 30 mg x kg(-1), the maximal concentration (C<sub>max</sub>) was 0.67 (0.18), 9.73 (2.31), 20.24 (3.85) and 58.05 (23.16) micromol x L(-1), respectively. The areas under the curves (AUC<sub>0-t</sub>) for doses of 1.2, 4, 12 and 30 mg x kg(-1), respectively, were as follows: 1.77 (0.41), 29.18 (4.68), 98.81 (26.85) and 246.12 (33.47) micromol x L(-1) x min. The pharmacokinetic parameters of BZP increased dose-dependently, and higher doses of BZP produced greater clearance and shorter half-life. The area under the concentration-response curve (AUC<sub>0-t</sub>) of different doses was similar, whereas the area under the concentration-response curve (AUC<sub>0-infinity</sub>) of the lower doses of BZP was larger.
