The problem is that if you just the keyboard, the keyboard inputs get played two times (or more), and it seems that the cursor gets stuck on the notes, and can't move around. I still have to work out what's going on, and if it's a keyboard setup thing, because it's kind of inconvenient to have the application played twice or more. Does anyone know what this is? Thanks, Alex . Regarding Solfeggio Maestro 0.5, it looks like a big update has happened, and there are some improvements that need to be made to the keyboard input section. The latest version of Solfeggio Maestro has been released. It is available for download

Market Research Report on T-Miners: Patterns, Specifications and Trends Report Abstract T-miners have been widely used in the mining industry and are especially prevalent in the case of high-grade tailings in copper, zinc, and lead deposits. As the top-down separation process, T-miners are mainly applicable in copper, zinc, lead, and other related mining processes. Since there is a large accumulation of crushed tailings, T-miners can make use of the crushed tailings of several engineering processes to achieve a great reduction of tailings. This report studies the worldwide and United States market for T-miners
