The Standard vs. Extended software suite The Photoshop creative suite came in a standard and an extended version, which adds powerful new software tools. I discuss these in "Choosing Photoshop and Photoshop Elements: The Basic Suite" in the beginning of this chapter. Figure 12-6, though, lets you see the difference between the standard and the extended versions of Photoshop. You can download the images at www.dummies.com/go/photoshoppeditingforbeginnersubntudeals if you want to try out the tutorials. Note that the images are not part of the book; they're just for illustration. They're quite large, and many readers may wish to save a copy to their desktop for viewing. Note that many of the files can be found on Flickr. Photoshop is best known for its powerful and feature-filled tools for image editing. Its other functions include file management (moving and saving files), creating graphics, creating effects and filters, and so on. Although Photoshop has many features, you may find that you need to dive deeper into the software than just using the toolbox. You may also want to check out Photoshop Elements. Sometimes, it can be easier to use Photoshop Elements to work on files without large numbers of layers. Photoshop offers a powerful set of tools, but it's hard to use them all at the same time. You can get a handle on them with practice and by working with them, one at a time. I cover a variety of different topics in this book, but for the most part, I focus on Photoshop's tools. Including text as a layer In Photoshop, you can add text to your document, just as you can with any other element, like shapes or layers. Figure 12-7 shows how to add a text box to an image. After you've created the text box, you can move and resize it as you would any other object. Figure 12-7: Add text by selecting the type tool and clicking the text box icon. To create a text box, click the Type tool and then click the text box icon. Alternatively, you can use the keyboard shortcut Ctrl+T to add a text box. When you want to fill the text box with text, you need to start by selecting the text. As with other types of objects, you need to click and drag to select text. After you've selected the text, you can modify it

Q: How to find the node by tag? I have a problem to find the node with the given tag, where $x$ is a [0,..., #(X)] node and $y$ is a [0,..., #(Y)] node. Anyone can help? A: Assuming your trees are rooted (at the nodes 0,1,2), you can use function treeFind(arr, what) local tree = {} treeInsert(tree, what) while true do local child = tree.firstChild if child then treeInsert(child, what) return child end end function treeInsert(tree, what) if tree.data[#tree.data] == nil then tree.data[#tree.data] = {} end tree.data[#tree.data][#tree.data+1] = what end function treeFind(arr, what) local tree = {} treeFind(tree, what) return tree end print((treeFind(tree) == 0) -- test This can be implemented in Lua pretty easily. FORT COLLINS — At first glance, the list of colleges with new capital projects committed for construction in fiscal 2017-18 is a veritable who's who of a state's finest public universities, including the University of Colorado, University of Northern Colorado, Colorado State University, Colorado School of Mines, and the University of Colorado at Denver. And it only gets more impressive from there, with the University of Colorado and University of Northern Colorado each moving forward with capital improvement plans for student housing, and the campuses of CSU, CU-Boulder and CU-Denver each breaking ground this month on their own new, major projects. Part of the growing trend is financial support from the current administration in Washington, D.C. In fiscal 2016, Colorado was the first state to receive a fiscal year 2017 allocation for

Q: Carrierwave not validating file type I have a rails app and I am using Carrierwave to upload an image. The problem is when uploading, it's still allowing the file types. Is there a way to just auto detect file types and only allow the types that I have specified? Any help would be appreciated. A: Use the validates_attachment_content_type! for this. :mountains - validates attachment content type To make sure the type of file passed to CarrierWave is what CarrierWave expects, add the validates_attachment_content_type! method to your model. This method will raise an error if the actual content type is different than what you've declared as the allowed content type. For example, to only allow JPEG and PNG files, add the line below to the model definition: mount_uploader :image, ImageUploader, type: 'image/jpeg', :validate_content_type => Proc.new { |a| a.content_type =~ /^image\/(jpeg|png)$/ } You can also pass a hash to validates_attachment_content_type! that will be applied to the uploaded content: :validate_content_type => { type, attachment } | attachment.content_type =~ /^#{type}$/ } In our previous coverage of the long-running GamerGate controversy, one of the pieces we mentioned was a hard-fought study by No More Game Time, a website that's been very critical of the gaming press. The study, which has been making the rounds on Twitter, used Google's Trends service to chart the flow of search terms across the Web: Unfortunately, there's one problem with this chart that we couldn't catch the first time we looked at it. While the chart appears to be tracking search terms over a large period of time, it looks like Google Trends is only collecting search data for recent weeks. Look at the last couple of weeks (August 3 and 4) in the chart below — no activity there: It's also impossible to tell whether the spike in people searching "GamerGate" is due to criticism of
