What's New In?

Define the scales you want to use for each different instrument. Configure the amount of different voices for the music track. Each voice will have a different instrument, and with every change you make in the different Zonk's sliders you will be able to hear the difference in the music. Add notes for each instrument individually and use the velocity slider to play the notes. You can change the note duration, velocity, and pitch. Set the harmony of the track and rhythm with the different sliders. Each note will have different instruments playing it, and the instruments will be controlled by the slider settings. MIDI instruments can be controlled with a single click and the music will play automatically. You can start the music in the middle of it or start playing a new track, add a tempo and play the composition. Music can play as background music, or be a part of the video. Once the music is ready, you can export it to a.WAV file and import it in the video editor of your choice. Zonk is an easy to use tool that can create MIDI music tracks for you. It is a very flexible program, allowing you to import sound for any instrument you want. This program works as a MIDI sequencer, and generates

Q: Get the last state received by the source I have a rxjs observable that updates some data source asynchronously.

so I need to get the last state from that data source. Is there a simple way to achieve that, without passing all the chain with id from the originalObserver? A: You could use `publishLast()`: `import { publishLast } from "rxjs"; observable.pipe(publishLast())`
