FoxLock is a free and easy to use application that allows you to quickly and easily create mozilla.cfg files that can be used to lock down a web browser. Firefox Key Maker is a handy tool that is designed to easily generate a master mozilla.cfg file for Firefox. It saves the user a lot of work since the new mozilla.cfg file is generated based on the user's setting and not anything at all. Similar to FoxLock, FireFox Key Maker also allows users to make a user.cfg file, but it is slightly different. It allows the user to set the Exclude and/or Include list. This guide will walk you through the steps of using FoxLock to generate a base mozilla.cfg file, then how to use FireFox Key Maker to generate a user.cfg file to include your own preferences. FoxLock is very simple to use. Download it from the link at the top of this article. Extract the downloaded file, and then open it by double-clicking the file's icon. Click "Start," as shown below: The program then scans the computer for

Firefox extensions. Allow it to find the plugins and extensions. At the end, click "Save" to produce the mozilla.cfg file. A message will appear stating that the mozilla.cfg file has been created. There will also be a dialog for entering the --dev-own-firefox-version and --dev-own-extensions commands. Both the --dev-own-firefox-version and --dev-own-extensions commands are needed to lock down the browser to run the Mozilla Firefox 30.0. Click Finish if you are ready to close the program. This is shown below: Open Firefox and click on Tools on the menu bar. From there choose Options. Look to the Privacy and Security tab, and check the box next to Customize Firefox, as shown below: Now look to the General tab of the Options box, and click OK. Once Firefox is running again, open FoxLock. Click the "Start" button, as shown below: FoxLock will scan the computer for Firefox extensions and plugins. Allow it to find all of the extensions and plugins and when it is done click "Save." There will also be a dialog asking for the --dev-ownfirefox-version and --dev-own-extensions commands. However,

Folks with an AMD RADEON 3000 series, or better card should have no issues running the game. However, AMD RADEON 7000 series or higher cards may run into a few problems when running the game. Due to the fact that we are not using the latest driver on this release, the AMD cards may run into a few bugs. You should try running the game without that newer driver and see if any of the problems you have are fixed. We will try to keep this list updated as we find more bugs and fix them. Thank you for
