"Treehouse of Horror 2" is a whimsical, one-of-a-kind experience unlike any other. Here's what gamers have to say about it... "Ultimately, 'Treehouse of Horror 2' has grown up. We've got larger-than-life characters and events. And it's the best fantasy game this side of Master Chef. There's no hyperbole here. Master Chef is fun. Master Chef is good. Master Chef is 'Treehouse of Horror 2'." Chris Crawford, PC Gamer "Prognosis #2: 'Treehouse of Horror' will continue to grow and evolve into a solid franchise. If it ever stumbles, if it ever stops delivering the goods, it won't be because of the quality of the production values, because those are excellent. It'll be because it gets tired of itself. And once that happens, it's over." Steve Delhomme, Gamezebo "Treehouse of Horror 2" sets out to be the first anthology-style game since the 'Best of' games by LucasArts and Electronic Arts. There's something inviting about a series of game scenarios with the potential for change and for growth. The set up for "Treehouse of Horror 2" was a good one, and it continues to unfold nicely." What's new in Where The Heart Leads:

My name is Jennifer. I am a 31-year-old single woman. The last 15 years of my life have been very difficult, as anyone who has loved and lost will tell you. My present life has taken on a significant new turn about a month ago, when I was seeing my gynecologist for routine gynecological exams; I was on my second or third visit. My gynecologist noticed a small pocket of fluid in my abdominal area. He tapped it with his gloved finger and the fluid gushed out. There was a small, tacky patch (about the size of a quarter) of blood and discharge on his finger, and it felt like the deep red inside of a grapefruit. He wrote on the chart, "Grapefruit size," and then reached in to try to squeeze more fluid out of it. That's when he told me that he had found a mass in my uterus. "It's benign," he said, "but it's malignant. It's cancer. It's grade three, which is bad, and it's likely inoperable." In the following moments, I remembered the many people I have lost to cancer (including my own father), and the very real possibility that I too might someday turn up on someone's chart with a diagnosis of that dreaded disease. I have experienced "pre-cancer" ("those are the years right before the descent into death") for the first time in my life. So this is what I am feeling: Scared that I will soon be diagnosed with cancer. Scared that this is how my future is going to unfold. Scared that this is my life. I was told not to get distressed, as my options for treatment were good. I have insurance, and I am a good candidate for chemotherapy. I have just returned from my radiation treatment, though, and I am truly horrified with the experience I just had. I went to my first appointment with a man named Dr. X, whom my newly-acquired oncologist (Dr. O) recommended. Dr. X is a distinguished gentleman of white hair and a well-tailored suit. He uses very calming language, comforting even. He was very gentle, a large part of my comfort being that I am terrified of physicians
