People with inflammatory bowel disease are at increased risk of colorectal cancer, which is the second leading cause of cancer mortality in Western countries. Case-control studies of large numbers of people with inflammatory bowel disease have shown an increased risk of colorectal cancer that is independent of age, sex, and ulcerative colitis, suggesting a role for both genetic and environmental factors. Despite this elevated risk, screening rates for colorectal cancer among people with inflammatory bowel disease remain low, particularly for those with ulcerative colitis. A systematic review of evidence for colorectal cancer screening in people with inflammatory bowel disease was conducted using an evidence-based and
