Honda Tractor International is an online retailer of manuals, parts, accessories, and parts accessories for Honda Tractors.IT HAS been a miserable few years for the Lebanese army. First a series of embarrassing defeats by Syrian troops in the mountains south of Damascus on the Syrian side of the border led to the resignation of the army chief in February. Then came the loss of several bases in Syria, followed by the expulsion of most of the Syrian troops from Lebanon. Last week a shambolic army parade was held to mark the 50th anniversary of independence. It was boycotted by the United States and almost everyone else in the region. And then Syria switched sides, invading its other neighbour and the army's main ally. The four-year old war, which has claimed as many as half a million lives and cost Lebanon up to $40 billion, is now turning into a fight for survival as it puts at risk the country's Christian community. Lebanon is quite unprepared for the consequences of the war's defeat and most of its inhabitants suffer from a degree of collective trauma. The army's apparatus is badly tarnished and its reputation as a guarantor of security has been severely damaged. The army's public image also took a battering in the civil war. Some soldiers were accused of collaborating with the Israeli-backed Syrian opposition fighting to topple the Syrian president, Bashar Assad. The loyalties of the army chief, whose forces are said to have pushed some of the rebels back to the Israel-controlled Shebaa Farms plateau, were never fully understood. There were also more serious allegations, such as those of complicity in the murder of former prime minister Rafik Hariri, whom the Syrians killed in 2005, that have never been fully investigated. Civil war The Syrian intervention, with its initial invasion of Lebanon and then the subsequent ratcheting up of the violence on the international stage, has left the country severely divided and has caused a massive brain drain. Although most Lebanese are Shia Muslims, who form almost a third of the population, the violence has also left many of the country's non-Muslim communities in the minority, feeling like second-class citizens.
