Question is: how to support the other antivirus such as Avira can detect this virus? A: It is a persistent downloader, which means it remains on your computer and often attempts to use it in further attempts to get your PC to download more malicious software. This is usually done by downloading it and then creating a "shortcut" to make it easy to download and run whenever it is needed. While downloading, it's scanning and reporting to the infamous Telemetry service. To "kill it", you can access the control panel and disable that by going to "Program and features" then "View" then "Turn Windows features on or off". Uncheck anything called something like "Telemetry" You can then delete the file at a later date by going to Control Panel -> Program -> Uninstall a program. I think the Windows 8.1 has something called "Win32 Subset" which will make Win10 or any other BitLocker aware versions work on it. You should be able to disable that as well but as long as you don't plug it in to anything new I don't think that'll make a difference. You can also go to the C:\Windows\System32\MountVol\DelayLoad\ directory and see if there is a unique identifier in there like "437b2536-ab3f-11e4-8a73-b715d30b5199" if there is then you can rename that file to one like "google.com" and prevent the downloader from having a name when it's being used. You'll need to go through all of this manually as it's something that's going to be a nightmare for you. It's a little like trying to clean up after a child. LOL If you don't have time to do this yourself you can pay someone to do it for you and then keep your machine safe from them ever again. I usually hate to do this as it leaves a lot of work and any job I do I like to do myself rather than pay someone else to do it for me. And no, there's no way to fully clean this from your computer. It's beyond what the OS can do at this point. The only thing you can do is remove the file and then delete the folder that it's in, then the registry key that it's using if it was able to do that. Hopefully that'll get rid of the virus it's 6d1f23a050
