I'm wanting to try out SWIG, the interface generator for Java, but it seems to be ignoring my local version. Can someone direct me to a download of this? A: The documentation on SWIG.org is pretty thorough. They say that it runs fine on Windows XP and newer, and Mac OS X. I'm not sure about Linux, but I don't see any reason it wouldn't work on those platforms. If you want to run it in a cmd shell, try: c:>swig.exe -java --add-java=javac.exe javac.c and it should open up a cmd prompt in the directory with javac.c. You can go to the java command prompt with cmd /c java or if you use the batch script they have posted on the website, you can type cmd /c java. From there, you can type in: java -version to see if it's working, or you can do: java org.swig.python.PythonMain to see if it's working. If you want to run it in Eclipse, there's an Eclipse plugin called SWIG which will generate the code for you, so you'd just have to pick the java target, and set your options accordingly. You'll probably also need to pick the option to add the.java source file to your classpath before you can do: java
